

I would emphatically encourage the FCC to uphold the Indiana law respecting an individual's right to telephone privacy! If a commercial institution wishes to use a communication medium for their sales or advertising purposes then they can pay for it. As far as I am concerned, as long as I am paying for the service, I am entitled to control it's use without having to pay extra to go to an unlisted number or some other blocking service. It is NOT their phone and I certainly do NOT want unsolicited calls! The only thing wrong with the Indiana law as I see it is that it thus far has not included fax numbers and also left it open for the so called unpaid direct representatives of charities.
